Combating antimicrobial resistance (AMR)

Antibiotic resistance is a global health challenge, not only in humans, but also in animals. As an industry and as a one health community, we have a responsibility to ensure the future use and effectiveness of antibiotics, when they are needed to work for treatment of illness. ProAgni, a pioneer of antibiotic-free animal nutrition products, commits to reducing antibiotic use in animal production. We use science and research to remove antibiotics from animal production without compromising animal health or farm economics. We believe through collaboration, commitment and small changes made by many; we will generate positive impact to reduce AMR. Because all of us need to be resistance fighters.
