

I'm a resistance fighter™

Joseph Sam Kanu
Pharmacist and epidemiologist

Combating antimicrobial resistance (AMR)

AMR is very big threat, particularly to poor nations like my country, Sierra Leone. My work and research focuses on AMR in my country. We abuse antibiotics, we misuse antibiotics, and we are now losing their legacy of saving lives and having a positive impact on human health. So, this is the right time for us to stand up and fight and to stop the growing threat of antimicrobial resistance. This fight cannot be achieved by one person alone. We need a concerted effort. We need to come together to fight this problem. And until we come together with people with like minds, we cannot achieve our aim of mitigating the effect of antimicrobial resistance. Because all of us need to be resistance fighters.

Learn more at AntimicrobialResistanceFighters.org

